Colombia - COFINET

Who is Cofinet?

For eight decades, their family enterprise has flourished, supplying the finest Colombian coffee to domestic exporters. Then, in 2015, they broadened their horizons, initiating the cultivation, procurement, and global export of specialty coffee.

As cultivators, they focused on pioneering innovative fermentation techniques previously unexplored in Colombia. At their farm and Processing Centre La Pradera, they meticulously handle the most exotic coffee varieties, unveiling distinctive profiles that were hitherto uncharted territory for Colombian coffees.

Costa Rica - VOLCAN AZUL

Volcan Azul is an old farm that was founded at the beginning of the 19th century by Alejo C. Jiménez and Wilhelm Kahle. Nowadays, the descendants of Don Alejo C. and Don Wilhelm want to further enhance the principles of quality inherited by the founders.

The farms are located on the slopes of Barva and Poás Volcano in Central and West Valley and the Saints region.

We have come to acquire over 1,500 hectares of rainforest for ecological preservation in areas where we grow our coffee as well as in the Osa Peninsula, a region in the South of Costa Rica is known for holding 2.5% of the Earth's Biodiversity, proud to know that our family is contributing to reducing the effects of global warming. This is the attitude towards the environment that we want to pass on to our children and future generations of our family.

Nicaragua - FINCAS MIERISCH

“It’s not easy achieving quality coffee year after year. Mother nature can only take us so far - the rest is up to us.”
— Doc Mierisch

Started his career as a Medical Doctor, but coffee farming has always been a part of his life. He’s a third-generation coffee producer and processor. The General of the operation but everyone calls him “Doc”.

In Nicaragua, the farms are located in the Matagalpa and Jinotega departments. Matagalpa is home to 6 farms, whereas Jinotega, a little bit farther north-west, is home to 3 farms. Each farm has a unique micro-climate and soil composition, which makes their management, and coffee quality, truly distinct from one another. Give them all a try, and see for yourself.

El Salvador - PROJECT ORIGIN

Los Pirineos is situated on the Tecapa Volcano, nestled between two peaks and surrounded by another seven volcanoes. This makes the views breathtaking, and also creates perfect conditions for drying coffee as the mill gets abundant sunlight and constant airflow each day.

Project Origin have proudly worked with the Baraona family for many years, and their impeccable processing techniques and wide range of varieties results in their profiles being consistently featured on our product lists every harvest.

Honduras - FINCAS MIERISCH

Dr. Erwin R. Mierisch, along with his wife, Maria Ligia McEwan de Mierisch, are Finca Mierisch’s 3rd generation producers.

Their children, Erwin Jr, Eleane, and Steve, got involved in organizing, judging, and participating in the Cup of Excellence program from the mid 2000’s, which helped them to learn all the hard work it takes to produce high-caliber coffee.

All three farms in Honduras sit at a higher altitude than any of our farms in Nicaragua. Erwin Jr.’s vision and hard work paid off with a 1st Place placing in Cup of Excellence 2019 with a Washed Gesha from Santa Lucia.

Panama - FINCA LERIDA

Finca Lerida's reputation is as old as the first coffee that Panama exported to Germany back in 1929.

The high quality coffee produced inside this exceptional plantation made its international buyers realize that there was more to Panama than just its Canal. This was, and still is, Finca Lerida.

Ethiopia - PROJECT ORIGIN

The birth of Project Origin began with a question: “can you try a sample of my family’s coffee?”

In their initial years, the Project Origin team first built relationships in Nicaragua and Honduras, focusing on direct trade with multiple coffee producers and investing into their farms and communities through a variety of projects.

Growth continued through Central America with the help of Claudia Lovo in Nicaragua and Mauricio Salaverria in El Salvador guiding Project Origin to producers and producers to Project Origin.

One by one, the number of countries increased and Project Origin became a name for supplying hundreds of farms’ coffees across eighteen different countries to roasters all over the world.

Ethiopia - SELECTIONS

Reality

"Although historically known as the nation where the coffee plant originated, Ethiopia experiences many issues and high levels of poverty. This is due to regional conflict and excessive dependence on the exportation of agricultural products.

One of the biggest exporters of coffee, Ethiopia's coffee business supports the livelihood of millions of households, coming down to about 30% of annual exports. Yet, it would shock you to learn that the average Ethiopian coffee farmer owns about $900 per year while the women who work in the coffee warehouses can make just about $20 per month."

Kenya

Nyeri county is a hub for producing and trading coffee and tea; the area enjoys the right natural elements and the farmers, processors, and agronomists who know how to cultivate great coffee.

Thiriku Coffee Cooperative, located in Tetu constituency within Nyeri county, is very appreciated by the local farmers because they are paid higher than they used to be, and they can make a living from coffee farming.

Kambarare Estate located in Kirinyaga county, on the right side of Nyeri county, is run by The Njagi family, especially by the son, Gerald Njagi, a 28-year-old coffee farmer, who wants “to see Kambarare producing the cleanest cup that Kenyan volcanic soil can produce.”
